Sinclair coefficients formula.

The Sinclair coefficients, derived statistically, are adjusted every Olympic year and are based on the Total World Records in the various bodyweight categories as of the previous several years.

ACTUAL TOTAL x SINCLAIR COEFFICIENT = SINCLAIR TOTAL

The Sinclair Total is calculated by taking an athlete's total (combined max snatch and clean & jerk) and multiplying that number by the Sinclair Coefficient.

Example: Who is the strongest?

If a 50kg man totals 178kg, a 100kg man totals 303kg and the 130kg man totals 323kg?

The math looks like this:

50kg male has a Sinclair coefficient of 1.713308.

178kg (total) x 1.713308 = 304.969 (Sinclair Total)

The 100kg male's coefficient is 1.112602.

303kg (total) x 1.112602 = 337.118

The strongest man by this definition is the 100kg man.

Sinclair scores more fairly comparing lifters of different body weights. The score is obtained by multiplying the lifter's Snatch and Clean & Jerk total by a coefficient which is based on body weight. The total lifts of the gold medal winners in every weight class at each Olympic Games are used to determine the formula that will be used for calculating Sinclair coefficients. Thus, Sinclair coefficients and scores are only valid for the four-year period commencing on 01 January of the year immediately following an Olympic Games.
